

STUDIES IN HUMAN RIGHTS

V.T. PATIL
T.S.N. SASTRY

THE BOOK

Human rights are of tremendous significance in the contemporary world. The preservation and protection of human rights against the coercive authority of the state are sine qua non of human welfare and prosperity. The study comes to grips with such crucial issues as human rights and judiciary, freedom of the press and state control, compensatory jurisprudence and National Human Rights Commission, role of education and right to development, role of women in promotion and protection of human rights through law. Internationalisation of human rights, stress management and human rights, public interest litigation, right to information, and terrorism and human rights. Social scientists, scholars, public policy makers, pressure groups, non-governmental organisations are deeply committed to the cause of human rights in the national and international arenas. The scholars in this study have made a distinctive contribution on various implications and manifestations of human rights with reference to societal peace, prosperity and development. The book is an excellent contribution to the extant literature on human rights.
